

As a 30+ year flight attendant, who flies International flights, I cannot imagine the depth of the consequences of allowing cell phone use during flights. With air rage at an all time high, I feel this would provoke each passenger already on the edge of violence, over that edge. Since 9-11 we do not need passengers at the back of the plane having the ability to co-ordinate an attack on that aircraft or crew with someone in the forward section via a cell phone. The only people that could be attempting to promote this phone use have either 1. never been seated next to a user that talks about private items loudly, at length and in detail, while you are trying to rest or 2. owns communication stock or cellular companies and would profit from this change. I feel the safety and the comfort of every other passenger and crew member on that aircraft would be in jeopardy should this change take effect.
